

Our story doesn't begin with words. It begins with a spark.

There are things in life that can't be explained — only felt. That flicker of heat when the embers begin to glow, the gentle kiss of warmth dancing across the grill. The crackling of wood giving way to flame. The light that pierces dusk and casts faces in a golden shimmer. It's a feeling of something primal. Of freedom. Of pure, radiant life.

We, Till Neugebauer and Niklas Kosel, grew up with that feeling. Not inside closed kitchens, but outdoors — where the air is fresher, the conversations deeper, and the nights longer. We sparked flames, cooked, laughed, and shared unforgettable moments with family and friends. And when we realized that these moments might be slipping away, we knew something had to change.

01

THE STORY

Two Minds. One Spark.

For Till Neugebauer, it all started in his father's workshop. Oliver Neugebauer, a second-generation master stove builder, understood that fire was never just a source of warmth – it was an element that transforms spaces and brings people together.

From a young age, Till watched his father tame flames within stone, crafting fireplaces where fire seemed to dance. But what captivated him even more was what happened when fire was allowed to breathe – to burn freely beneath the open sky. Those crackling evenings with family and friends, the shared meals, the laughter – being outside and soaking in life. These weren't just fond memories. They became part of who he is.

Niklas Kosel came from a different background, but shared the same fire within. As a trained carpenter, he learned how to shape materials, create spaces, and perfect every detail by hand. But for Niklas, craftsmanship was never just about function – it was about feeling. He knew that great design doesn't just look good – it moves you. After his carpentry training, he studied design in craftsmanship and came to understand: a space doesn't simply exist. It shapes us. It speaks to us. It inspires.

Till brought the fire. Niklas brought the form. Together, they shared a vision:

To create a place where both could come alive.

A space that doesn't just serve a purpose – but becomes a memory.

A Vision That Wouldn't Sleep

But this idea didn't begin with them. It began over a decade ago with Oliver Neugebauer – who envisioned not just an outdoor kitchen, but a firecentered gathering place. A space not only for cooking, but for connection, enjoyment, and life itself.

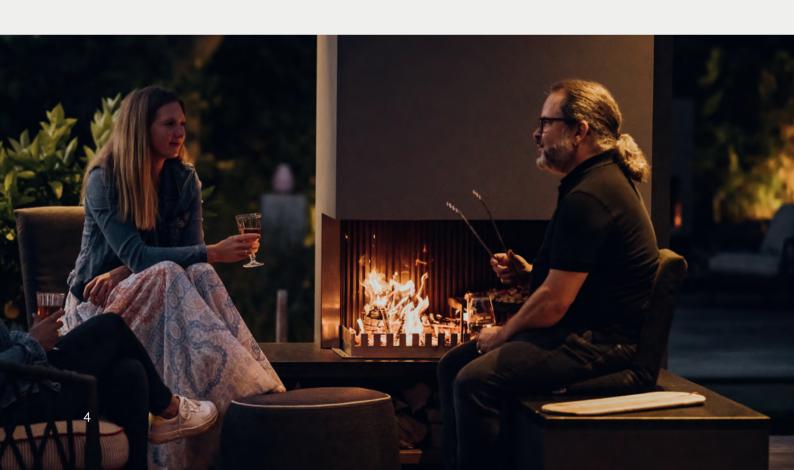

Finding the right material, however, proved to be the real challenge. Stone, steel, stainless steel – none lived up to his standards. It wasn't until a renowned professor introduced him to the breakthrough: marine-grade aluminum. Resilient, weatherproof, and made to last for generations.

In 2015, the very first Freiluft Kitchen came to life. By 2017, it had already received the German Design Award.

But with success came a choice: Should Oliver continue his lifelong work in traditional stove building – or pursue this new vision?

In the end, the weight of doing both became too much. He chose the path he had always walked – and set the Freiluft Kitchen aside.

But some visions have a will of their own.

THE NEXT CHAPTER

Preserving a Way of Life

Till couldn't simply accept his father's decision.

His connection to the Freiluft Kitchen ran too deep

— it had shaped him. It wasn't just a product. It was a feeling. A way of life. And that feeling couldn't be lost.

When he shared the news with his friend Niklas, the response was immediate. This couldn't be the end. Too many memories were tied to it – the long summer nights around the grill, the legendary kitchen parties, the quiet Sunday mornings with coffee and open skies.

So they made a decision that changed everything: They would build a manufactory dedicated to that very feeling. The Freiluft Manufaktur was born.

Not because the market needed it. Not because it made good business sense. But because they knew — this space, this kitchen, this fire — could mean just as much to others as it did to them.

And they weren't interested in continuing what already existed. They wanted to take it further. To do it better.

Together with engineers and surface technology specialists, they refined the system, upgraded the materials, and improved every detail of the construction – to make the Freiluft Kitchen even more durable, more enduring. They created new concepts like the Freiluft Fire and Freiluft Island – not just places to cook, but places to come together.

Above all, they understood something essential: True perfection is never off the shelf.

Each kitchen needed to be unique — tailored to the space, the style, the rhythm of its owner's life. To honor that individuality, every piece from the manufactory carries a custom badge with its own serial number.

Today, Freiluft is more than a brand. It's a creator of places — where craftsmanship, design and fire become one with nature. The heart of the garden. The soul of the gathering. A place where memories are made.

An Invitation to Experience

This magazine is more than a showcase – it's an invitation.

Not just to discover our craft, but to experience a way of life. A feeling that lingers. A memory that stays.

Let it inspire you.

And perhaps, somewhere in these pages, you'll find the spark for your next unforgettable moment.

Warmest regards,
Till Neugebauer & Niklas Kosel

PureAlu Cabinet

Marine aluminum is a special material used in areas where the highest durability and precision are required. Refined through a unique powder coating process, it achieves offshore-grade quality. This material combination is used in various components of our handcrafted outdoor kitchens.

All in One Piece

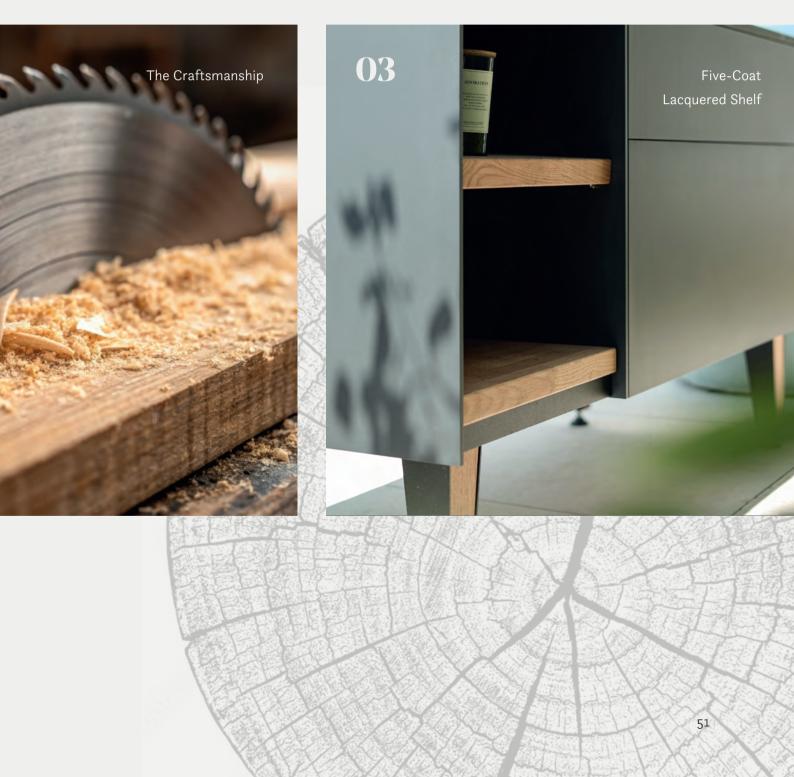

Solid Oak

All wooden shelfs in our outdoor kitchens are crafted from high-quality solid oak, providing a natural warmth that creates the perfect contrast to the powder-coated aluminum core. Thanks to its inherent strength and additional treatment with eco-certified boat varnish, solid oak is the ideal complement to weather-resistant aluminum and rustic natural stone. A perfectly balanced blend and meticulous craftsmanship result in over 100 steps in the manufacturing process, ensuring that every Freiluft shelf is completed to perfection.

Each Element is One-of-a-Kind

Natural Stone

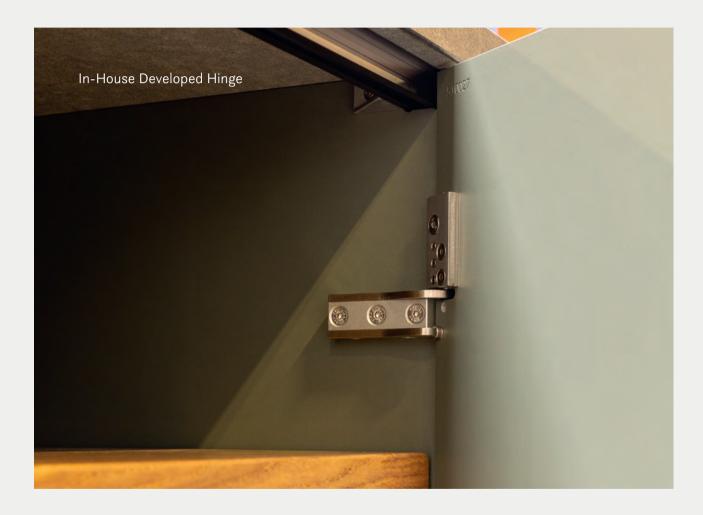

Natural Stone is not only a statement of exclusivity, but also extremely durable against heat, frost, and scratches — making it perfect for year-round outdoor use. Each slab is unique, shaped by nature over millions of years, highlighting the individuality of our handcrafted kitchens. Additionally, natural stone is easy to maintain and offers sustainable longevity — an investment in quality that lasts.

Natural Durability

Hinge

The doors of a Freiluft Kitchen carry weight — each piece a statement of solid material, undeniably high-quality. Conventional hinges aren't up to this challenge. That's why we trusted in our own in-house solution: a hinge that combines strength and precision — made from anodized aluminum and stainless steel. A construction designed to withstand pressure effortlessly, while remaining unshaken by the elements — maintenance-free, weather-resistant, and with the same elegance that defines a Freiluft Kitchen.

Drawer System

The handle-free drawer seamlessly integrates into the overall concept of the Freiluft Kitchen – functional, robust, and uncompromisingly elegant. An integrated drainage system with precisely beveled elements ensures rainwater flows away efficiently. The design is deliberately water-resistant: moisture finds its way out, while the cabinet remains optimally ventilated. Durable, long-lasting, and made for every season. With a front crafted from 8mm marine-grade aluminum, a flexible interior, and the intuitive push-to-open mechanism, it's the perfect, reliable companion.

04

Elements

Like a harmonious orchestra, every element contributes to the creation of a true masterpiece.

And the best part: our cabinets are always expandable and evolve with the needs of our customers. This system allows us to design innovative solutions tailored to individual requirements, without compromising on durability.

Where Fire Meets Flavor

The Heart of Every Barbecue

I believe that fire has always been intrinsically connected to humanity, and that connection resides in all of us. When the flames dance and the wood crackles, we experience a return to something primal – a natural deceleration, in the truest sense. This feeling was what I wanted to convey when I created the grill fire. It was this very return to our roots that inspired me to bring cooking over an open flame back to life, just as our ancestors did many years ago.
